CHIEF OF RACING SEES GRAVE DANGER AHEAD

By J. W. MARCHBANK

William Woodward, chairman of The Jockey Club, seldom makes his thoughts known, but whenever he does speak it is likely the words will be of more than ordinary significance. Right now there is wide discussion of an address delivered in Lexington the middle of last month and one would be hard put to it to disagree in any important particular with the sentiments expressed by the head of the sport in this country.

Part of the talk was for the special benefit of sports writers; one trenchant line called on the scribes to pay more attention to the sport and less to the price of a mutuel ticket. He commended the efforts of a group developing in some sections that is emphasizing the breeding of the horses and their sterling performances rather than indulging in inaccurate description of commercial facts.

Chairman Woodward stated, and I believe truly, that it is not difficult to define "commercialism" in racing. He says it consists of large crowds, big returns, a big "take," keeping the horses in the paddock for 45 minutes so the play will be large, reduction in distance of the longer races to obtain bigger fields and more betting, special wires into the track and other things which go to satisfy the greed of promoters as well as the greed of the states for taxes, and perhaps the greed of the politicians for jobs.

One cannot but agree when Chairman Woodward points out that the public wants real sport, which means the competition of high class horses, but it does not mean necessarily large crowds, big turnover and large fields of platers. As to purses he said:

"Real sport does not mean the giving of overwhelming purses. I believe it better to build up and maintain substantial stakes which slowly weave themselves into tradition."

Recognizing there is plenty of racing, Woodward declared it would be little short of a calamity if more states joined the procession, as the sport cannot stand it. The peak has been reached with nearly 10,000 horses in competition this year, with an average of fifteen starts for each horse. In the Woodward stable, with a seemingly sound lot of horses, eight of them averaged only one start apiece, so it is plain, as Omaha's owner says, that the horses themselves can stand no increase in racing.

Hold Busy Session On Monday And Pass On Many Important Matters

Inspection by candling and weighing eggs offered for sale in retail stores in order to protect consumers from inedible and short-weight products ordered at their meeting on Monday by the San Mateo County Board of Supervisors in compliance with new state laws.

Public hearings on the formation of the Montara and Brisbane sewer maintenance districts were set by the board for 2 p. m., Monday, December 23.

One hundred and forty residents of Brisbane, represented by Attorney W. H. Morissey, petitioned for the formation of the Upper Peninsula sewer maintenance district.

Formation of maintenance districts is necessary to secure federal funds for sewer work in the two areas.

Claim of Milton T. Farmer and Wells Fargo Bank for $1500 for rock allegedly taken from a Canada road quarry was referred to the district attorney.

Similar action was taken on the claim of Mrs. Mabel Grihault for $25 for rental of an apartment formerly occupied by Kathleen Robinson, San Mateo murder victim, which had been sealed during the coroner's inquiry.

Claims of three Colma truck gardeners for damages, claimed to have been suffered through diversion of flood waters, were deferred pending inspection of the drainage project by the individual board members.

SILVER CIRCULATION BIG HELP TO MINING

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

Noting that British Columbia produces 55 per cent of the silver output of the Dominion of Canada, Sidney Norman, mining expert of the Vancouver Sun, comes out with the suggestion that each employer up north pay at least $5 worth of silver dollars to every payroll employe. The movement is along the line of one I initiated in my enterprises down this way some time ago. Whenever possible I enjoin all the people in my employ to use silver rather than currency. The system helps materially in increasing the mining of the white metal and that is something that should be done both north and south.

Broadminded writers everywhere are praising the consummation of the trade agreement between Canada and the United States. Already the talk is for a still further reduction in duties than that agreed upon by the Roosevelt administration and the northern authorities. As Earle Knight in his column "As We See It" in the Alaska Weekly pertinently says, almost any thinking person will agree it is a step in the right direction. In developing the thought, Editor Knight states:

"We have everything in common with Canada except allegiance to Great Britain. Our living standards are the same, our average scale of wages is substantially the same, racially we are brothers—our industries should need no protection against the product of Canadian industry and theirs should need none against ours.

"There is no logical basis for a tariff wall between the United States and Canada. Erasing it entirely would be the first step toward the eradication of an imaginary boundary and a move toward that North American nation about which every born North American has occasionally dreamed."

As was forcibly set forth by President Roosevelt in his recent speech in Georgia, gentlemen in well warmed and well stocked clubs discourse on the expense of government and the suffering they are going through because the government is spending money for relief without giving due thought to the beneficial results attained with the dollars that are being spent.

Most of the outspoken opposition to the federal administration's restoration of prosperity comes from the American Liberty League, made up of bankers, big business men and "sound" citizens. A keen analysis of the situation was made lately in the Nation by Stuart Chase, an eminent economist. He ridicules the charge that the administration has done any more than was necessary for getting the country out of the depression. He asks rhetorically:

"Do you suppose the administration is spending for the fun of it? Do you suppose the lines on the face of Harry Hopkins are those of cosmic glee? What do you think reversed the tailspin, and turned a system deficit of thirteen billions in 1932 into a small surplus in 1934? What do you think opened the banks, stopped the farmers from shutting off the food supply of cities as the holiday movement gained, began to substitute black ink for red on business ledgers? Fairies? Elves? Mickey Mouse?

"Spending reversed the trend of the national income, opened the banks, relieved the farmers. The United States government took the diverted dollars—frozen in mattresses, safety deposit boxes, bank deposits—and put them back into the spending stream. And saved your shirts, gentlemen of the Liberty League.

"Balance the budget, forsooth; government spending has balanced the whole financial system. In the good old days the system was balanced by the private reinvestment of savings in productive enterprise. Yet in 1929, of total savings of fifteen billions only five billions could be absorbed in productive enterprise, so great had become the problem of excess industrial capacity. A large fraction of the other ten billions was roaring around Wall street."

FUNNY FILM OF BUSINESS LIFE AT LOCAL THEATER

Love Affairs Of Private Secretary Involved Her In Curious Situations

The problems of a private secretary are briskly dealt with in Claudette Colbert's new Columbia picture, "She Married Her Boss," which shows at the Daly City Theater for three days, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, December 8, 9 and 10.

Produced by the same company that gave you Miss Colbert in "It Happened One Night," the new film has the same buoyancy and freshness that made its prodecessor a five-way prize-winner. "She Married Her Boss" is undoubtedly the grandest fun since the falling of the walls of Jericho.

Miss Colbert herself is delightful; her inherent charm and vivacity have never been shown to better advantage. As a very efficient secretary who carelessly falls in love with her boss, she sees to it that he takes time off one day to buy her a wedding ring. That proves a costly mistake, for the marriage turns out to be one of the maddest things one can imagine.

Edith Fellows as the boss' precocious nine-year-old daughter; Katherine Alexander as his nerve-wracked sister; Raymond Walburn as a butler; Jean Dixon as Miss Colbert's crony; and Clara Kimball Young in a small role are all splendid.

On the same program, "Without Regret," with Elissa Landi and Paul Cavanaugh.

Amateur Nigh Sunday and Bank Nights, Tuesday and Saturday.

The bride was attired in a modist brown suit. Her flowers were a shoulder corsage of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Kathleen Welsh, the bridesmaid, wore a becoming green suit. Her flowers were a corsage of gardenias.

Victor Grey was the best man.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hanschen of Templeton avenue.

The groom is the son of Mayor and Mrs. H. H. Smith of Los Olivos avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith both graduated from Jefferson Union High School and have a host of friends, who wish them much happiness.

GRAND JURY INSTRUMENTAL IN SAFETY DRIVE

New Body Is Formed To See That County Highways Are Made Safe

Safety on San Mateo County highways is the aim of a newly appointed committee created by the San Mateo County grand jury following a meeting of 32 law enforcement officers with the inquisitorial body at Redwood City Tuesday night.

Municipal Judge Rudolph Rapsey of San Bruno was chosen to head the committee, which is comprised of judges and police chiefs.

Judge Rapsey told the grand jury and the rest of the assemblage that the State Highway Commission had ignored recommendations made more than a year ago by a traffic safety committee of the American Legion.

Judge Rapsey pointed out that the Bayshore highway has become known as the "Boulevard of Death" because of the many traffic mishaps that occur upon it.

A survey was made of the highway and recommendation made by the Legion committee to the State Highway Commission and with but one exception, Rapsey said, the commission complied with the recommendations.

Allen J. Ward, grand juror and chairman of the law enforcement committee of that body, called upon all those present to co-operate with the grand jury in its fight to make San Mateo County highways safe

The new committee is comprised of Chiefs of Police Thomas Burke, Claude M. Hirschey, Captain Paul Perussina, Judge Edward I. McAuliffe and Assistant District Attorney Louis B. Dematteis.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Heinz and family of Salinas and Frank and Joseph Schuler were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wettstein of Brunswick street on Thanksgiving Day.

SHASTA WATER is nature made but differs from other waters in that it doesn't come up out of the earth's interior but originates high above MOUNT SHASTA where cool vapors condense to form drifting snowflakes. Falling on the rugged glacier slopes these flakes melt and sink down through the rocks into the heart of the mountain, gathering tonic forces from beds of health-giving minerals, until at SHASTA SPRINGS a pure, sparkling water breaks forth into the light of day bubbling with life and vibrant with vigor.

FROM SHASTA SPRINGS it is transported in specially constructed cars to the company's various bottling centers for bottling and distribution in siphon bottles and otherwise throughout California and is obtainable at clubs, cafes, hotels, groceries, drug stores, etc. Thus from Glacier to glass this SPARKLING WATER comes to you in all its purity as a health-drink or for blending with other beverages.

OTHER WATERS similarly bottled are offered to the consumer but THERE IS ONLY ONE SHASTA WATER FROM SHASTA SPRINGS and as such it is plainly labeled for identification by the consumer. Without this label it is not genuine SHASTA WATER.

Influence Immortal

The men who are gone seem to have left behind them in the world much of their power of vitality; and I suppose hardly a day passes in which we do not do some act, small or great, under this power of inspiration of our predecessors, something we should not have done, or should have done differently, if, even with all the machinery of living and all the truths we know now, we had had no predecessors, had been the first tenants if our earth.—Philips Brooks.

SYNOPSIS

As Alan Garth, prospector, is preparing to leave for his mining claim in the Far North, a plane lands at the airways emergency station. In it are Burton Ramill, millionaire mining magnate; his daughter, Lilith; and Vivian Huxby, pilot and mining engineer. Believing him to be only an ignorant prospector, the men offer to make an air trip to Garth's claim, although they refer to his samples of platinum-bearing ore as nearly "worthless." Lilith Ramill, product of the jazz age, plainly shows her contempt for Garth. Through Garth's guidance the plane soon reaches the claim site. Huxby and Ramill, after making several tests, assure Garth his claim is nearly valueless, but to "encourage" young prospectors they are willing to take a chance in investing a small amount.

No more was needed to confirm Garth's suspicions. He glided across the glade and ran on through the woods like a startled caribou. The thick growth of spruces screened him from the view of anyone up on the open tundra.

He vaulted upon the wing of the monoplane and ran along it to jump into the cockpit. In a moment he had hold of Huxby's tool-kit. He went at the engine like a skilled airplane mechanic.

When, after a few moments of quick work, he replaced the tool-kit and ran back out the wing, there was a small metal object inside his buckskin shirt. He jumped off and slipped away to an alder thicket, a short distance along the lake bank.

Less than three minutes later, he heard a heavy puffing and wheezing and the snap of dry branches. Then the three staggered into sight. Mr. Ramill was purple from exertion. His mouth gaped wide with his gasps for breath. Neither his daughter nor Huxby was winded. But both were flushed from the exertion of supporting the portly millionaire.

The girl's expression was one of disgust and anger. She stopped several feet short of the plane.

"Oh, d—n! Why the rush? We're out of sight now. I'm going to take a rest."

Her father was beyond words. As she let go of his arm he slumped down with a suddenness that almost pulled Huxby over on top of him. The mining engineer peered back through the spruces, and around at the thicket where Garth lay in wait.

"Just one more go, darling," he appealed. "The fellow must know how to handle his rifle. If he comes in sight of the plane before we get out of range— Please, sweetheart! Remember it means millions to us—millions! I'll give you that emerald necklace we saw at Tiffany's."

"You certainly will! And Dad will do more. I'm to have a third in this mine that you say is worth so much. Is that clear?"

"Yes, darling; take hold," Huxby urged. "We both agree."

She waved him towards the plane. "Fetch a flask. We'll never get him aboard without a bracer."

Huxby ran to vault up on the wing. The girl had pointed out the obvious fact. Her father was in a state of collapse from overexertion. He could not move until revived, and he was too heavy for them to lift bodily.

The engineer swung into the cabin and hastened back ashore with a flask of whisky. During his short absence Mr. Ramill had ceased to gasp. He could draw deeper breaths. Two or three swallows of whisky tautened his flabby muscles. Helped by his daughter and Huxby, he struggled to his feet and staggered out along the rock shelf to the plane.

The wing end stood neck-high above the ledge. While Mr. Ramill took another bracer of whisky, Huxby boosted the girl up on the front edge. She grasped hold of her father's collar. Huxby gripped his thick legs below the knees and heaved. Mr. Ramill's hands were on the wing edge. He pulled with all his whisky-borrowed strength. His corpulent midbody rose above the edge of the wing.

Huxby gave a last upward heave. It enabled the girl to drag her father over on the convex surface. Huxby vaulted after to help her lift the prone millionaire to his feet. They started to lead him along the wing top to the fuselage of the plane.

Behind the backs of the three, Garth stepped clear from the alders and came forward, silent as a stalking lynx. Midway between the head of the plane and the spruce to which it was tied, he stopped and lowered his rifle, butt down, to lean on the muzzle.

"Hullo," he sang out. "What's happened? Mr. Ramill ill?"

At the first word, Huxby tensed and glanced over his shoulder. He let go of Ramill. After a moment, he jerked around and thrust out his automatic pistol towards Garth.

"Swing up that rifle, butt end forward," he ordered.

"Why, what d'you mean?" Garth questioned, his mouth half agape.

"I mean business," Huxby answered. "Hold up the butt—up above your head; then come forward and lay the rifle on the wing."

Garth rounded his mouth still more. "My word, man, you must be stark mad. I've no thought of shooting you."

"I'm taking no chances. Put that rifle on the wing, or I'll fill you full of lead."

"Mad—mad as a March hare," muttered Garth. "Don't shoot."

He lifted the rifle overhead, butt forward, as ordered, and advanced, still gaping. He came within a step of the wing edge and paused. The girl was gazing at him with open contempt. He had been such an easy dupe. Her father looked grave, yet made no move to interpose when Huxby leveled the pistol and took deliberate aim.

CHAPTER III

Outbluffed.

A man of iron nerve might have risked death from the leveled automatic of the mining engineer by taking a sudden dive under the wing of the monoplane. Once in cover, anyone quick with a rifle would have had an even chance against the holder of the pistol.

Garth made no such daring break. He obeyed the order to lay his rifle on the wing top.

"There you are," he said. "That should clear your head of your crazy notion I'm dangerous."

Huxby met this with a cold smile. "You're right in part, you poor fish. It would be crazy to fancy you're at all dangerous. I'm the one who has the gun, and I'm ready to use it. Fortunately for you, there's no need to shoot you if you keep on doing as you're told. Back up now and cast off that line."

Three steps away from the wing, Garth halted to protest: "Mr. Ramill, surely you'll not abandon me this way—not even let me keep my rifle. That is what is called the long travois. I'll starve before I can reach the Mackenzie."

Miss Ramill smiled mockingly. "Oh, no, woodsy. You can throw stones. All you need do is stay right here and eat your fellow rabbits. As soon as we record our claims, we'll come back to replace your stakes with our own."

"Yes," her father agreed. "No danger of an experienced prospector like you starving, this time of year. Wait here for us, and I'll pay you that two thousand dollars I offered."

Huxby signed with his pistol. "There's your answer, boob. Now step lively. Cast off that line."

Before the threatening muzzle, Garth turned about and walked along the ledge to the tie tree. He passed the rope end through the tree loop, and pulled loose the bite of the stay hitch. Had he then let go of the rope end, the taut line would have whipped the loop around the spruce trunk and set the monoplane adrift. Instead, he held fast. Huxby frowned and raised the pistol. "What are you waiting for? I told you to cast off. It's no use your whining. You don't suppose we'll pass up the chance to record that placer, do you?"

"No," Garth replied. "You've shown your colors—hoisted the black flag. Only thing, a woman is a woman. Let me suggest that you try your self-starter before I let go this line. I've heard that airplanes sometimes balk. If you can't get yours into the air in time, the wind and current will drift you down-lake to those falls."

"How sad! You dumb dupe, if you think I—"

"Wait," cut in Mr. Ramill. "Hand me your pistol, Vivian, and try the motor. The fellow gave up his rifle a bit too readily."

Though far from pleased, Huxby passed over the automatic. Mr. Ramill had recovered from his exhaustion, and the way he handled the pistol showed that he knew how to use it.

Huxby swung into the cockpit and threw on the self-starter. It buzzed—but the propeller did not turn over. The motor failed to go. Another try brought the same barren result. The engineer pilot made a hasty examination of the magneto. He sprang out on the wing, in a cold fury.

"The d—d sneak has crippled the motor. Give me the pistol."

Mr. Ramill held up a restraining hand. "One moment, Vivian.—Now, Garth, what have you done?"

Garth smiled. "Merely removed one of the breaker points, Mr. Ramill. It's platinum, you know, and that's what we're bargaining over. The point is quite safe here, inside my shirt."

"Shoot him," said Huxby. "We're not going to be done by a fool trick like this. Shoot the idiot. Go on, chief. He's only a lousy woods bum. It's a matter of a million at the least."

The older man leveled the pistol. "Garth, you heard him. You've played a silly trick. We have the drop on you. If you value your life, bring that stolen breaker point here, and be quick about it."

"How about the line, sir?" Garth inquired. "If I let go, the plane will be swept out into the lake."

"Tie it again."

"What if I'd rather not?"

For the second time Miss Ramill chimed in on the talk: "It would be just too bad for you, woodsy boy. Dad is a better shot even than Vivian."

"A better shot and a no less cool thinker," Garth replied. "How can I hold this rope if I'm shot? Those falls and the rapids below— Hold on there, Huxby! Not so fast. You can come ashore; but Miss Ramill and her father will come with you. There'll be no rush to catch the line until all three of you are off the wing."

Mr. Ramill started with Huxby out along the wing. His daughter did not move.

"If you fancy I'll leave the plane, you can guess again."

Her father spoke in her ear. None too graciously, she took the offered arm of her fiance. Side by side, the three came out to the end of the wing. Mr. Ramill handed the pistol to Huxby, and knelt, ready to slide over the front edge. The girl jumped down lightly, without waiting for assistance. Huxby handed her the rifle, laid the pistol on the wing edge, and grasped Mr. Ramill's hands.

As the portly millionaire slid over, off the wing, Garth let go of the rope end and sprang forward. The loop whipped from around the spruce trunk. He grasped the slackened line and flipped it out into the swift rush of the milky stream.

The head of the released plane at once started to swing offshore. Huxby grabbed his pistol and leaped down to grasp the wing edge. He shouted for the others to catch hold. But the unexpected bump of the edge against their heads had made both father and daughter crouch down.

Huxby stepped back to brace himself for a shove against the rotary outthrust of the wing. His rear foot went over the round of the water-polished ledge. The wing thrust him on outwards. Before he could let go, both of his feet were off the ledge top. He slid down with a splash into the swirling water.

The engineer plunged upstream three of four steps to a split in the glassy-faced ledge. He clawed up the crevice and sprang to his feet on the rock shelf, drenched to the armpits by the milky water. But his right hand still grasped his automatic pistol.

Once more Garth seemed to have acted the part of a fool. For a few moments Miss Ramill and her father had crouched motionless, dumfounded by the letting loose of the monoplane and its shove of Huxby off the ledge.

Garth stood like an unconcerned onlooker. While the engineer was still struggling up out of the stream bed, Mr. Ramill took the rifle from his daughter and aimed it at Garth.

"Take your time, Vivian," he called. "I have him covered."

"Hu-wait," panted Huxby. "Leave him—to me."

He stood dripping till he caught his breath. A flirt of the pistol barrel made sure it was free from water. He took a step closer to Garth, his eyes cold, his lips tightened in a bitter smile.

"Another clever trick, Jack—and your last. I'll be generous and give you half a minute for your prayers."

Garth eyed him gravely. "That is indeed generous. Shall I reciprocate by praying that you and Miss Ramill do not suffer too long from the tortures of flies and starvation? Mr. Ramill may possibly be able to get over the pass, though I doubt it. In any event, the first muskeg will stop him. You and Miss Ramill probably will last for two or three weeks longer."

Huxby glared. "You tricky devil! Clever, aren't you? Here is where you last less than a minute."

"Yes?" Garth smiled. "I might suggest to Mr. Ramill that he reflect upon the inadvisability of murder in Canada. The Northwest Police always get their man. If he is unaware of the fact, I might appeal to the womanly gentleness of Miss Ramill."

"Go ahead," Huxby sneered. "You're welcome to try."

"Why bother them needlessly?" Garth came back at him. "My dear man, you are no rash fool. Had you been other than what you are, do you suppose I would have walked up so innocently and let you get the drop on me?"

The coolness of tone and look that went with the question compelled Huxby's consideration. His eyes narrowed. "Out with it."

"You see I have you sized up right," Garth replied. "You're neither a hothead nor a fool. All your moves are based upon cold-blooded calculation. In this case, you'll calculate these factors: If you kill me, you will most certainly starve to death, unless you first sink in the slime of muskeg bog. The only other alternative is for you to stay here and freeze at the first onset of winter. Platinum is of no more use to a dead man than is gold."

The mining engineer stood silent. Garth went on:

"We are speaking of what concerns you most. So I'll not mention the no less certain death of your partner and the lady to whom you are engaged. The other side of my argument is that, if I am not murdered, I can guide you back to the Mackenzie. What if you then had another chance to steal my claim? Wouldn't that be a big inducement?"

"Lower your pistol, Vivian," Ramill ordered. "Garth has us outplayed. He holds the aces. Look at the plane. It's heading straight down the lake towards the falls. There's no chance for it, unless the wind veers."

Garth nodded. "This breeze will keep on blowing down off the glacier until the first autumn blizzard. It's a shame, sir, to crack up so fine a plane. But you would have it."

"I!"

"You and Huxby. You may be a financial pirate, Mr. Ramill; that's not saying you're a hypocrite. You'll not lie that I'm responsible for this mess. I gave you a chance to share my claim. In return, you've done your best to bilk me out of it all. This is the result."

The big "pirate" looked him in the eye.

"I offered you cash down. You refused. Said you wanted to play out the game. So far, you've taken most of the tricks. That monoplane cost me forty thousand dollars. You see it heading for a total loss. Let it go. The question now is the next play—Vivian, what do you suggest?"

Huxby regretfully eyed his pistol. "It's a damnable fact we can't kill the slick devil. We'll tie his hands, and start him guiding us out of this hell-hole at once."

Garth smiled. "What! still up in the air? Better come down to earth and face the other facts also. For the same reason you can't kill me, you can't make me guide you. I knew exactly what I was doing when I turned the plane adrift. I knew I was putting you all in a hole out of which none of you can hope to escape without my help. If I die, every one of you will die. I've faced death many times. I am not afraid to meet it. None of you dare chance starvation or freezing. I do not need you, but you must have my help, or perish. Though you now have the guns, I am master of the situation. All three of you will do whatever I consider necessary to get you out alive."

"When do we start?" Huxby demanded to know.

Garth looked at Mr. Ramill. "It's a guess. May be two weeks. More probably three."

Miss Ramill flared, outraged. "What! Hang around this disgusting hole a single day? We'll start this instant."

Duns by Post Forbidden by the U. S. Government

Despite all that has been said on the subject of dunning by postal card, says Pathfinder Magazine, there still exists some confusion on this matter. Section 471 of the United States postal laws and regulations says in part: "Any postal card upon which any delineations, epithets, terms, or language of an indecent, lewd, lascivious, obscene, libelous, scurrilous, defamatory, or threatening character, or calculated by the terms or manner of style of display and obviously intended to reflect injuriously upon the character or conduct of another, is unmailable."

The Post Office department has ruled that this "threatening" provision covers cards which threaten bringing of suits or legal action in the event accounts or debts, etc., are not paid. However, this does not include notices of fraternal and other organizations of dues, assessments, etc., even though they call attention to the fact that failure to remit will result in suspension or other action. Neither does it include notices of when accounts will be due nor a respectful request for settlement of current accounts. But in any case such payments must not appear to be nor be referred to as past due.

Mammoth and Dixon caves in Kentucky are mentioned in public documents of record in 1799. It has been proved that Dixon cave is a continuation of Mammoth.

Fishing Fleet Conducts Funeral for Ghost Ship

The Flying Dutchman, encountered usually in the neighborhood of Cape Horn, and prophesying disaster at that most dreaded ocean corner, is the most famous of ghost ships, but now we hear that another sinister vessel has taken to appearing and disappearing in the South seas. It takes the form of a phantom launch, which haunts the fishing grounds near Chatham islands, a lonely outpost 400 miles southeast of New Zealand.

Four years ago the craft was first reported, and soon afterwards a launch in which 11 fishermen were going to a football match foundered, all being drowned. More recently a lonely fisherman claimed to have seen it; a few days later he was swept overboard to oblivion by a heavy sea. Perhaps with the idea of exorcising this grim visitant, the whole fishing fleet assembled on the approximate spot, and held a solemn funeral service. The ghostly launch is said to appear in misty weather and to travel at supernatural speed.

Dam Faced With Marble

An attraction, for visitors at Athens is a dam, recently constructed to supply the city with water, faced with marble. The stone is taken from a quarry which once supplied ancient Greek sculptors.

CHRISTMAS STORY CONTEST WINNERS

Following are the three articles written by students of the Woodrow Wilson School which were adjudged the best in the order of their appearance:

Through the entire world, nations are celebrating Christmas. Houses are gay with music, and laughter, trees glitter with gold and silver balls and other bright ornaments. Packages are hidden in closets and rooms, the air is full of exitement and good fellowship, children waiting for Santa claus.

Nearly all of our American customs have come to us from other lands. Since the United States is made up of people of all nationalities, it is no wonder that different families celebrate Christmas in different ways.

One thing is common to all—the spirit of giving The gifts need not be expensive. They may be as simple as a popcorn ball wrapped in bright paper, cookies cut in the shape of stars; fir trees or a box of candy made at home. Don't you wish that every day could be as jolly as Christmas time?

Dolls On Parade

It is two months before Christmas and we find Mary Lou, who is a grown doll with rosy cheeks and blond curls, relating her experiences to baby Jane, a doll with a composition head and a rubber body.

"Oh Jane, said Mary Lou, what a terrible day I have gone through." Today a woman and her husband came in the toy-shop to buy a doll for their girl for Christmas. The sales girl took me from the show-case and told the woman what a sweet doll I was. She handed me to the woman, who pulled at my pretty curls and twisted my head until I thought it would fall from my shoulders. She even twisted my arms and legs till I almost cried with pain, that isn't all, she lifted my clothes in front of a man. Oh how my face burnt from shame! Then I heard her say, "You had better show me an unbreakable doll, as Dorothy is very rough with her dolls."

"I too, cried Jane, have had a terrible day." The salesgirl bumped my head in taking me from the case. The tears came to my eyes, and when the customer saw me, she cried, "Oh what a darling doll." She too lifted my clothes, and poked and punched my poor body till I was gasping for breath.

"Well, said Mary Lou, I am sure we shall find a good home this Christmas with a loving little girl to care for us after all."

A Christmas Present

This Christmas of nineteen thirty five, the children of Daly City will receive three of the biggest presents that will ever be given away. These gifts are three big, lovely, schools which are to be completed by the end of the year.

In January the children will be able to go to their new schools. Won't they be happy when they tell their friends who are less fortunate about the new schools and thus encourage more families to move to Daly City in order to give their children the opportunity of attending these fine institutions.

When Cylinders Miss

There are other reasons for missing cylinders than those growing out of defective spark plugs or otherwise inferior performance of the ignition system. If the cylinder continues to fail to fire after the plugs have been cleaned, check the valves as a possible cause. A weak valve spring is a common cause of misfiring.

Gaskets which permit fumes to leak from the exhaust pipe or any point between the engine and the rear end of the exhaust should be attended to at once.

LESSON SERMON OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"The Lord reigneth, he is clothed with majesty; the Lord is clothed with strength, wherewith he hath girded himself: the world also is stablished, that it cannot be moved." These words from Psalms comprise the Golden Text to be used Sunday, December 8, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be "God the Only Cause and Cretor." Included among the Scriptual selections will be: "Thus saith the Lord, the Holy One of Israel, and his Maker, Ask me of things to come concerning my sons, and concerning the work of my hands command ye me. I have made the earth, and created man upon it: I, even my hands, have stretched out the heavens, and all their host have I commanded" (Isa. 45: 11-12).

The following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included: "Matter is neither created by Mind nor for the manifestation and support of Mind . . . . In proportion as the belief disappears that life and intelligence are in or of matter, the immortal facts of being are seen, and their only idea or intelligence is in God" (p. 279).

WEEKLY BULLETIN

By Chief A. P. Chesney

The prominent place held by these modern fire sticks among the originating causes of loss is understandable when the tremendous production of matches is contemplated. Each year about three hundred billion are consumed in the United States alone, or eight hundred million daily. To put it another way, this means that in terms of averages approximately five hundred thousand flames are started every minute.

Each of these matches holds the possibility of causing a disastrous fire—even a conflagration of city wide proportions. Therefore, every time you strike one be careful what becomes of the burning stick; it may result in the destruction of your home and perhaps end the lives of those in it. Never cast away a match stick while it is still flaming, or even glowing, because it is only too likely to ignite any inflamable material at hand.

Some miscreant with a preverted mind stole one of the nozzles off one of the hose reels in the Daly City Theater. It is absolutely useless to anybody, as it will not fit any hose used around the house, and if it was stolen for the measly sum of fifteen or twenty cents, that the junk man would give for it, the party that took it was pretty cheap. It might have been the cause of giving a fire a better start if it had not been noticed by the fire marshal on his inspection tour.

DEDICATION WILL BE CELEBRATED

On next Sunday, December 8, with the Feast of the Immaculate Conception the Catholics of Daly City will celebrate the tenth anniversary of the dedication of their beautiful new church, of which they are so justly proud, to the service of our blessed Lady under the title "Lady of Perpetual Help."

The Blessed Sacrament will be exposed on the high altar, which will be beautifully decorated with lights and flowers.

In the evening the holy hour will be conducted from 8 to 9 o'clock and a sermon appropriate for the occasion will be delivered.

The children of the Parish School will sing the morning service and march in the procession. The regular church choir will sing at the evening service. A sacred concert on the chimes will be an added feature.

NEW PRESIDENT ELECTRIC UTILITY

The new president of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, is James B. Black, widely known among California utility men and regarded as an able and worthy successor to the late A. F. Hockenbeamer, who died November 11. Black was chosen for the position at a recent meeting of the company's directors.

Formerly vice president and general manager of the Great Western Power Company of California, which was absorbed by the P. G. & E. in 1930, Black has been a vice president of the North American Company for several years, with offices in New York. The wide financial experience gained here, and his previous operating experience coupled with his intimate knowledge of northern and central California, were among the factors leading to his selection.

Born in Sycamore, Illinois, in 1890, Black moved with his parents to California when he was 10 years of age. He was graduated from Lick School in San Francisco in 1908 and from the University of California in 1912 as a mechanical engineer. He went to work at once for the Great Western Power Company as a service inspector and rose from one position to another, until he became Vice President and General Manager in 1922. Since the merger of 1930, he has been a director of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company.

"Mr. Black will assume his duties at once. No other changes are contemplated among the management officers of the company."

Presbyterian Church Finds Scoutmaster

Being a firm believer in the Twelfth Scout Law, Grace Presbyterian Church has been sponsoring Boy Scout Troop No. 151, which meets in the church social hall.

A new forward step has been made in the finding a Mr. E. J. Halcrow, who has had considerable experience in Boy Scout work and who has now consented to take an active part in the local troop. The troop is meeting on Friday evenings.

FORM NEW BODY FROM VETERANS

(By W. J. Lehigh)

The first meeting with the new official family in force was held on Friday, November 22, and everything went smoothly. Comrade Jensen, our new commander, held down his chair like an old timer, as did all the other new officers.

A Christmas tree party and show is in the offing for the Juniors of the Post and Auxiliary, and a good time is contemplated by everyone. The boys and girls are looking forward very eagerly to this affair. Those parents who have children eligible to these organizations should see that they join in time to participate in the numerous good times that are in store for their youngsters in the near future. In time these will be two of the outstanding organizations in the entire country and everyone should be proud to have their children as members of either the Boy's or Girls' Corps. An "esprit de corps" exists among the youngsters and one can tell they enjoy being members.

On December 18, a grand whist party will be given by the Post and the Auxiliary in the City Hall. The funds are to be used to defray expenses of the Christmas tree party for the children.

The Cooties of San Mateo-Santa Clara Counties were formerly organized and named last Saturday, November 30, at Palo Alto. This branch of the V. F. W. was named "Alta Mesa" No. 22. Several of the comrades from No. 2044 were named as officers and were given the final third degree in real style. The members of Old Glory No. 2044 who joined this group are Comrades Boyd, Jensen, Linser, Lehigh, Brulez and Albertus, the latter a transfer member.

The next regular meeting of the Cooties will be at Daly City, in the Little Italy Hall, on Saturday, December 28.

Duty Is That Which Is Done for Good of Others

What is duty? With regard to ourselves it is to be independent of the senses, and with regard to others, it is to be untiring in giving help and support; help to live well, to will well, to wish well; help by agreement and by opposition, by giving and by withholding, by firmness and by compliance, by praise and by blame, by silence and by words, by what is pleasant and by what is painful.

Dwellers on the same earth, travelers of the same hour, and companions along the same road, we ought to help one another; and when we reach the resting place, we shall have first to render an account of what each has done for the happiness of the rest—for joy, or for goodness. A kind look will win its reward.

GAS, GAS ALL THE TIME, CAN'T EAT OR SLEEP

Adlerika acts an BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only. Adlerika gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas pains, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika greatly reduces bacteria and colon bacilli."

Give your stomach and bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and chronic constipation. Sold by all druggists and drug departments.

Leaves Over 600 Living Offspring; 5 Generations

Over six hundred living descendants have been left by Engel Dine Janssen, a widow who has died at Esens, East Frisia, at the age of ninety-one years. The old lady had one husband and fourteen children, ten of whom married young, having in their turn an average of ten children apiece. These grandchildren married young in their turn, till at the end of her life Frau Janssen could point proudly to five generations of offspring.

Her family, from children to great-great-great-grandchildren, was spread over the whole region and beyond it.

ALL SUPERVISORS SAY WILL SEEK RE-ELECTION

Five Members Signify Intention To Again Be Candidates

Spiking rumors that they will retire from office at expiration of their terms, every member of the San Mateo County Board of Supervisors has revealed he would be a candidate for re-election next year. All five supervisors will come before the electors if they wish to retain their seats.

There have been reports in the county that certain members of the old board might retire next year, but there was no evidence of it in the statements made.

Supervisors Walter M. High, Burlingame, and Fred E. Beer, San Mateo, elected last year for four-year terms, but who lost two of the four years when they failed to qualify and had to be appointed by Governor Frank F. Merriam, will seek to retain their seats. High said he was elected by the people for four years and expected he would be returned to serve it.

The senior members of the board, Supervisors John W. Poole, Redwood City; Manuel Francis, Half Moon Bay, and Al Witt, Daly City, all will be candidates to succeed themselves.

Numerous citizens of the county have been mentioned as likely candidates, but as yet none has definitely expressed an intention of filing for positions on the board.

PROTECT IGNITION

Ignition conduits that are cracked form heat or age and rubber insulation that is oil soaked or terminals that are loose should be replaced or repaired without delay.

Otherwise ignition trouble may result, with damage to electrical units.

MINING NOTES OF VARIOUS SECTIONS

Recent developments at the Second Relief-Arlington Mines, Erie Creek, Nelson district, have been of the most satisfactory nature, according to word which has just been brought from the mine.

Milling is maintained at the rate of 40 tons daily, with approximately 90 per cent of feed coming from No. 6 level. Construction of the new mill, which will be of all-cyanide type, similar to Sheep Creek Gold Mines plant, will have capacity of 75 tons daily, effecting a saving of from $3 to $5 per ton through increased recovery and decreased freight costs.

Dentonia Mines Ltd., Greenwood district, showed balance of over $100,000 in liquid assets over liabilities, according to a statement issued last month by Nelson S. Smith, president, supplementing the financial statement submitted to shareholders at the recent annual meeting ,covering period from March 31 to June 30.

The first annual meeting of Gold Recoveries (Cariboo) Ltd., was held in Vancouver recently. President J. Horvath covered the general history of the company and explained that in the face of financing discouragements directors had been instrumental in maintaining the company by meeting current expenditures.

A big dredge, to be installed on Coal Creek by General A. D. McRae, of Vancouver, has been landed on the banks of the Yukon, and will be hauled into Coal Creek this winter by two big "cats" now on the ground awaiting the freeze-up to start freighting.

The Coal Creek holdings that have been acquired by the McRae interests were owned by Frank Slavin, well known old time mining man of the Yukon. Slavin has been prospecting and mining on Coal Creek for a long time. The results of his prospecting convinced him that while he had a good placer proposition, sufficiently rich in spots for pick and shovel mining it would scarcely average up to a high standard, and in order to reap the full benefit modern machinery would have to be installed.

Old time miners on Cleary Creek, in the Kobuk district, wait for a freeze-up before they work their claims instead of quitting work when the first ice appears, according to W. K. Wran.

"There is so much water to contend with," Wran declared, "that it is impossible for the old timers to recover the gold during the summer season. They wait for the ice, and then remove sections of the creek, ice, bedrock, and all, and pile it on the bank to wait for the thaw. In the spring and summer they wash the gravel."

About $7,000,000 worth of gold has arrived at Seattle from Alaska since July 1, with prospects that $18,000,000 worth—the highest total in twenty years—will be received by the end of the fiscal year, June 30.

George L. Swarva, head of the government assay office, estimated gold produced in Alaska will be from 10 to 20 per cent higher than in the past fiscal year, with the value even higher because of higher prices.

BROKEN FAN BELTS

A broken fan belt is a quick way to stop almost any car in hot weather.

It not only means diminished efficiency for the cooling system, but with so many cars fitted with generators driven by the fan belt, it also means that the engine will have to be run on current direct from the battery.

BETROTHAL HAS BEEN ANNOUNCED

Mrs. Pauline Sundermann of Winchester street, entertained at her home, Saturday evening of last week, in honor of her daughter, Miss Pauline, who celebrated her birthday and also announced her engagement to Mr. Anton Bruheim of San Francisco.

A delightful evening was spent in dancing after which dainty refreshments were served to the following guests: Lisa Groth, Lena Baker, Sophie Scheit, Martha Ruissilie, Minnie Barner, Katherine Emhoff, Kathyrn Hulbert, Anita Groth, Mrs. A. Jullish, Arthur Groth, Bob Baker, Wendell Sheib, Arnold Ruissilie, Otto Buchacker, Frank Enhoff, Henry Sundermann Jr., Bill Barner, Robert Baker and Anton Bruheim.

the uniform plan of organization for the "On With Roosevelt" Clubs throughout the state.

Other visitors and speakers were: Mrs. Neenah Lesseman, organizer of the Democratic Women's Clubs of San Mateo County; Peter J. Haggerty superintendent of the mint; Philip J. Fitzgerald of the Personnel Department, PWA, San Francisco; William A. Lawson; Robert A. Higgins, representative from National Committee of Young Democrats; Hugh F. Mullin, president of their local committee; Claude Hershey, chairman of the County Committee; Jerome T. Casey, Ray Gallagher, Antone Hock, A. V. Swift and Evans A. Fletcher.

Immediately following the several short addresses a temporary chairman and secretary were appointed to formulate and put into effect the plan of procedure outlined by Judge Welsh, and upon taking count of the number of club membership cards already signed it was discovered that the San Mateo County Club starts off with a nucleus of 500 members.

A conference committee, to comprise representatives from each of the active Democratic organizations within the county, was appointed tnd Mrs. Lesseman was selected to act as chairman.

The "On With Roosevelt" movement is far reaching with its county clubs throughout the state. While there is no membership fee or other monetary obligation, it does carry the individual pledge of every loyal supporter of President Rosevelt for his re-election in 1936.

Immediately preceding adjournment, the following resolution was unanimously endorsed:

"Be it resolved that we, the members of the San Mateo County "On With Roosevelt" Club, endorse the administration of our great President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, and we pledge to do all within our power to bring about his re-election."
